DEUNOUING THE PROTECTING ATTORNEY AND THE JUDGE.

MEMORIS of the Str. et Railway Com. pany and Representing of Ant-Union Papers and Bling Com- mittee of War.

People who read the Telegram-Herald yesterday morning must have been re- minded of the boy who drew pictures and wrote underneath "This is a horse." The paper published a half-col- or article purporting to be an inter- view with a striking conductor, and cal- led to discourage the strikers and all the other trouble-makers...

Notwithstanding the Telegram-Herald's positive declaration that there are no people foolish enough to believe that the article was dictated by Fred S. Clark and its publication paid for at rates pro- portionate to the wages paid the "Jimmy Townshend" who take the place of re- sponsible men in fact. It is any one's guess that it was a matter, re- vealed that it was a matter, re- vealed that it was a matter...

CARRIED TO THE CLOUDS

How a Cyclone Swept Away a Schooner

DETROIT, Texas, May 28.—E. C. Jer- ry, a well-known captain of Packer company, Choptaw Nation, who is in the city today relates a singular incident of a late schooner. Perry tells us in this way: "It was about 6 o'clock on the afternoon of Friday, the 23d, that dark clouds appeared in the southwest and in a few minutes the clouds turned dark blue, as if some fire they were on their way with lightning. A perfect calm suc- ceeded and the boat was sufficing. The clouds seemed to beat in the middle, going east and north-west. There for a low rumbling noise like continuous thunder. On the prairie was a bunch of ca- chis which belonged to a man named Corling. The terrific wind of what you might call a tornado, lifted the ca- chis and some of them were blown into the trees, killing them outright. Now, I am going to tell you some of the most interesting things I saw. It is nevertheless the truth. I saw a calf carried up into the clouds and disap- pear. I saw a man and woman and their children lifted up into the air and carried up into the clouds. I saw a man and a woman and their children lifted up into the air and carried up into the clouds...

DIED LIKE A SOLDIER

A Famous Old Soldier Goes to His Last Rest. NEW YORK, May 28.—Of Mortimer's dead. He was led out like a soldier and shot. For over a year he had been an invalid, and it was to put an end to his misery that Mr. Withers permitted him to do as he pleased. Mortimer was 26 years old and died full of honors. On the race and in the stud he was one of the great horses of the century. Pierre Lottard imported him about 12 years ago, buying him from the Government. He was a great horse in his career on the French, Gen- eral and English turf. Winning 200 days at 100 and one-half miles tomorrow, and was up to any weight, 140 pounds, in the world...

INDIANA STRIKERS. General Possession of the Coal Mines, Cane and Englees. Crawfordsville, Ind., May 28.—A great deal of maneuvering Sheriff McCluskey claims to have gotten service of three of the strikers on Monday. The reason it is so hard to serve notices is because the strikers have formed their lives into camp with headquarters at Crawfordsville. They are now in the camp and no one is allowed to approach unless he has the password, "I'm a professional scab."

DOES HE MEAN THE MOB?

Mayor Shappeare Hints at the Hilar Authorities. ST. LOUIS, May 27.—In an interview with Mayor Shappeare of New Orleans here today, regarding his recent ex- perience of the mob in New Orleans, he said that he had received a number of one of the principal witnesses in the Mafia bribery case, he said that he believed the trial was thoroughly rotten, and that the only way to get rid of the mob was to make an appeal to a higher power than that which is disgracing the name of St. Louis. The mayor said that the police are allowed to interfere with the law, but that the mob is allowed to interfere with the law. The mayor and party left this evening for New Orleans.

Commander Bieckeler's Sentence Approved.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Secretary Tracy has approved the findings and sentence of the court martial which recently tried Lieut. Charles Bieckeler for the shooting of a man on the charge of negli- gence in allowing the United States steamship Galena and Nina to be sunk on the coast of Newfoundland. The court found that Bieckeler was negligent in not stopping the ship in time to prevent the collision. He is sentenced to a term of one year, and to retain his present rank and pay during that term. His sentence expires on Friday, August 1st.

Called Without Warning.

Justice Breckenridge Drops Dead in the Presbyterian Assembly. DETROIT, May 28.—During the after- noon session of the Presbyterian assem- bly, Judge Bieckeler died of a heart attack. The cause of his death was a sudden stroke. He was 60 years of age and had been suffering from high blood pressure for some time.

Fogged by White Caps.

LAURENS, S. C., May 27.—The steamship "Soo" was fogged by white caps here last night. The ship was carrying a large quantity of goods and passengers. The fog was so dense that the ship was unable to see anything ahead of it. The captain ordered the ship to stop, but the white caps were so high that they struck the ship. The ship was damaged and several people were injured.

Plenty Here to Be Acquitted.

ST. PAUL, S. D., May 28.—Plenty Horses, the Indian charged with murdering Lieut. Caser, was acquitted by the jury this afternoon.

ANOTHER SCHOONER LOST

Thomas and a Member of Muskogean went Down in Lake Michigan.

CHICAGO, May 28.—There is every reason to believe that the schooner Thomas Hume has gone to the bottom of Lake Michigan, with on board B. H. Sim- mons, the agent for the owners of the schooner. The firm in his behalf that the vessel is lost. Mr. Deming said that he had just received a dispatch from Hackley & Home of Muskogean, the owners of the missing schooner, stating that the vessel had not arrived there on 9 o'clock last morning. The Hume cleared for Muskogean a week ago about the same time the Rose Simmons cleared. Mr. Deming remembered that a sailing log small came from last Thursday night. The Simmons put back and left here for 24 hours. Then she left for Muskogean, got back and arrived there at 10 o'clock last night. Mr. Deming said that the Hume was either struck by the squall or had been in collision and had sunk. He said that the Hume was a schooner of about 200 tons. The accident occurred within twenty miles of Chicago. As the wind has been from the southwest since last Thursday night, he believes that the schooner must have drifted toward the head of the lake. He said that the schooner was carrying a cargo of lumber. Mr. Deming said that the schooner was owned by Harry A. Hume, who was a resident of Chicago. He was a member of the Chicago Yacht Club. He was a well-known yachtsman and was a member of the Chicago Yacht Club. He was a well-known yachtsman and was a member of the Chicago Yacht Club.

MAY LAST AND AUGUST.

A SENATOR LOOKING OUT FOR HIS DOG DAYS

The House Takes Another What? Without Making Any Per- spective Progress. LANSING, May 28.—When the senate convened this morning Senator Wheeler asked leave of absence for himself until the third week in August. He affirmed that by that time the house would surely have completed its work with the senate in the work. After the senate had adjourned to the request of the senator from Marquette, a few reports were made by committees, some work was done in com- mittees, some of the whole, and then a recess was taken until 3 o'clock.

The mingling school appropriation bills were scheduled as a special order for this afternoon, but inasmuch as the senate had so much unfinished consideration of the appropriation bills, they were postponed until next Thursday morning.

The agricultural college committee reported the appropriation bill for the institution in a highly mutilated condition. The appropriation was cut from $100,000 to $25,000. The committee on labor reported a bill for the benefit of the laborer. The bill was passed.

After the judicial committee had reported a bill for the benefit of the laborer, the bill was passed. The bill was passed.

THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Pointers for "Only a Woman." ERROR MORNING PRESS-It is certainly refreshing to see a newspaper communicate to its valuable paper, which, by the way, is fast becoming the organ of the people. In this morning's issue there are two communications that I feel deserve an answer, because they seem so to be pertinent. One asks questions that had ought to be asked in the same spirit in which they are asked. First, let it be known once for all that a trades union is a trades trust; it is not to do for labor precisely what it does for capital.

The wall paper trust (now defunct) stimulated the demand for wall paper by cutting off the supply, thus enabling the price to rise to a prohibitive profit. So, too, with all other trusts or combinations of capital. Now, when we know that there is a trust or combination of capital stalling under some other more beautiful name, controlling all the goods of the community, it is not the realm of human necessity, it is not a trust for those who have to win their bread by the sweat of their brow to form trusts, combinations or unions of workers in order to meet the insatiable demands of organized capital? You must fight Satan with his own weapons. We are free to admit that both are abnormal, but I hope that your correspondents can plainly see that the combination of capital is the more normal and the organization of labor, now, in answer to Charles Guillaume's query, "did not the strikers inaugurate the demand that the company should not employ non-union men?" I did, and rightly so. If by combination of capital players better their condition by shortening of the hours of labor and increasing their wages is it right that they should work with those who assisted the company in the effort to keep them out of the market, but combination of capital are not built that way. Your correspondents should remember that the non-union man if he remained in the employ of the company after a successful strike would have contributed anything to its success, but doing their best to defeat the beneficent object for which the strike was inaugurated.

When a city wishes to extend its limits what is the argument advanced by those inside the city? They say: "You outsiders are enjoying all of the privileges and benefits of our city government without paying any city taxes." The union man says to the non-union man: "You are enjoying all of the benefits derived from our union without paying any of the expense incurred by maintaining it. You are a dead beat, you are doing, but you refuse to pay the laborer."

Reading selections from the Paper. It was one of those wild nights you read of in nine novels out of ten. The cold spring rain splashed viciously against the windows, and the wind rattled and banged as the forest gusts went whirling through the deserted streets. It was lodge night, but Brother Fay concluded that it was better to stay at home than to go out in the rain. He was particularly as his mother-in-law was on her periodic inspection tour, and spending a couple of days with him. With a right rattle he called in the rocker, his feet in a chair and a newspaper spread open before him like a screen.

Presently he chugled, and wife and mother looked up from their sewing inquiringly. "Is there a remarkable case," he explained, looking over the top of the paper, and with a suspicious twitch about the corners of his mouth he read aloud: "A model husband died recently at Cornish, N. H. He had been married twenty years and never spent a night away from home." "Well, I should say he was a model husband," broke in the old lady, grimly. "But the right rattle he called in the rocker, his feet in a chair and a newspaper spread open before him like a screen. No lodge could coax him away from his mother-in-law so significantly. "Poor fellow," he ought to have a monument erected in his honor. "Brother Fay held the paper a little longer than usual, and then he said: "Never spent a night from home. He was paralyzed."

Without the storm beat harder and louder, and the wind rattled and banged, while within silence reigned, save the suppressed rattle of the paper and the rustle of the great through the pillow case the old lady was working on. -National Weekly.

Characteristics of the Urograsians. The whole Banda Oriental and its inhabitants strike one as being more refined, more amiable and more gentle than the people of any other country. Nevertheless, in the country everything is very primitive, and one is astounded at the rough way in which many of the rich exercise their power over the estates in the simplest and most comfortable houses. These men own leagues and leagues of land, which they live like the patriarchs of old—with two or three generations of children under the same roof and eating at the same table—in the old-fashioned circle way. Such men, it may be imagined, are not progressive; they continue their pastoral industry in an old-fashioned, apathetic manner, leaving to nature almost everything except the operation of selling and receiving the money, and above all, they cannot be persuaded to change their lands and let them off for farming.

Urograsians being kept back chiefly by the conservatism of the creole land holders, who, in their own minds, are inadequately developed. The law of inheritance and the obligatory subdivision of property among the heirs will modify the state of affairs in the course of time, and these vast holdings will be gradually broken up and developed in the proper manner. This, however, will necessarily be slow and meagre, as the state owns no lands, the increase of immigration can only be slow in proportion. -Theodore Child in Harper's.

Not Literate. FARMER Ellsworth lives in the suburbs of a little Massachusetts town, and is a man of considerable consequence among his friends and neighbors. During the time of the revolution and war he had, his wife, read much, and his comments on the literature of the day, though not often grammatically expressed, often displayed discrimination. Not long ago he took a book of short sketches of country life from the town library, and when he brought it back he had to pay a small fine, having kept it several days over the time allowed.

"I'm well and glad to pay it, too," he said, and he turned to his wife and said: "You enjoyed it, then?" asked the librarian. "Enjoyed it? I should think we did!" Farmer Ellsworth said. "My wife, especially, has ready every one of them stories twice over. But I'm bound to say," he added, in his characteristic critic, "that it ain't exactly what I should call literature. Why, it's just like folks." -Youth's Companion.

Two Kinds of Consensus. A census of the United States differs in its very conception from a European census. Once in ten years, as with us, the English government makes an enumeration of the inhabitants of the kingdom. The time chosen is the night of the 31st of April. On or before that day the enumerator must leave at each house within his district a family schedule, which contains a list of all the persons who are in the house on that day. A census of the United States is a very different matter. It is taken on a certain day—usually the 1st of June—but the question is not who is in the house on that day but where he was on that day, but where on that day he had "his usual place of abode." -General Francis A. Walker in Forum.

Decline of Rural Population. The gradual depopulation of the rural districts relatively to the urban first attracted attention in the case of New Hampshire. The Massachusetts census returns showed the same condition of things. An analysis of the returns from Connecticut, however, completely confirmed the tendency. A dozen of the largest cities show four-fifths of the increase of 133,558 in that state, while 156 other towns show an increase of less than 20,000, many of the agricultural or hill towns having less population than in 1880.

It is still more serious fact that this tendency of agriculture to decline is not confined to New England. We recently showed that the decline of the cities of Ohio, thirty-six, outside of the cities, had lost in population. It has also been discovered from the returns of the state of New York that, outside of the cities of over 10,000 inhabitants, the population of the state above the Harlem river is less than it was ten years ago. In fact, as far west as Indiana and Michigan, as well as in Tennessee, West Virginia and Maryland, and some of the South Atlantic states, the same tendency is quite marked. As the analysis of the returns in all the states relative to rural and urban population approaches completion, it is shown to be true beyond all dispute that in all the older states agriculture is steadily declining.

And what have we in the newer states? In such states the farmer struggles on, but he is steadily sinking up to his neck in mortgages. What are known as the great "truck farms" of the country ship their products from 500 to 1,500 miles away from the great industrial sections of the east, and are the victims of exorbitant rates of transportation on the one hand and of a merciless money lending fraternity alien to their own class on the other.
