GRAND RAPIDS. MICH. THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1891. THE NATIONAL CONGRESS OPENED YESTERDAY AFTERNOON. Welcomed by Mrs. J. C. Wenham of the Literary Club—Major Dill Disappoints Them—Interesting Papers—The Dismissed—Today's Programme.

The Baptist church was well filled yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Julia Ward Howe called on the women of the Literary Club. The president called on Mrs. J. C. Wenham, who is president of the Ladies' Literary club, extended to the ladies of the congress a hearty welcome, saying that many things had been planned for the pleasure and comfort of the guests and that the mayor would formerly open the gates of the city to the delegates at the evening session.

The question is asked how are women to succeed? The foundation of success is a substantial education and the more thorough it is the better for knowledge and power. A woman should do what she can do best. The school is to her what an apprenticeship is to the mechanic. Another condition is a high and noble aim and the motto is service first.

Success in life depends upon the work we make of our time. No woman can succeed in all directions; she must choose the sphere in which she will be successful, then make that her chief field for the best efforts of her life. Her aims should be wide and her wants many; let women choose of their own volition.

Now first, what recreation is best suited to the individual mind must be determined. The individual mind must be developed and the individual interests must be followed. A woman must find her own recreation in her own work. A woman must find her own recreation in her own work.

While men have created the state, women have created the society. We have a right to be heard in the same way as men. The ideas that men have been obliged to recognize, and that is cooperation. Men have learned the value of cooperation and we women are beginning to learn the same lesson.

The result of this new lesson is the placing of women in the front lines of the world. Higher work and higher education should be given them without rendering back to the men. It was their duty to look after the classes more unfortunate, especially those who are unable to read and write.

An officers' meeting was called for 7 o'clock this morning at the Grand Rapids Hotel. The meeting was held in the parlors of the hotel and was presided over by Mrs. Clara B. Colby of Nebraska, who said that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss the matter of the proposed amendment to the constitution.

Vocal and instrumental music will be interspersed in the programme. The programme will be interspersed with vocal and instrumental music. The programme will be interspersed with vocal and instrumental music.

The report of the inspectors of jails showed that during the six months from July 1, 1890, to Jan. 1, 1891, there were 1,200 prisoners in the jails.

The first paper of the evening was read by Charlotte Emerson Brown; subject, "The Conditions of Success for Women."

GRAND RAPIDS. MICH. THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1891. ENDED AT EAST CLASS AND WERE DISTANCED BEFORE THE RACE. TWO YOUNG OLD HARRIS AND HER DISASTERS. FOUR HUNDRED WHO SHOULD BE SENT TO DWIGHT.

The Keely, bi-acting of gold, cure for inebriety is attracting more attention at the present time than the celebrated Keely motor did, but the Keely's are in no way related. The main office of the asylum or hospital where the fluid is injected into the veins of those who have become slaves to liquor, morphine or opium habit, is at Dwight Hill, a branch office having been established at White Plains, N. Y., to accommodate the gilded youth of the elite class.

Grand Rapids has sent her contingent to Dwight and one of the gilded youths who has just returned after a three weeks treatment says that before entering the retreat, his appetite for strong drink was insatiable. After his treatment, he had such an abhorrence of alcoholic liquor of any kind that he would far rather take a handful of matches, chew them and swallow them.

Among the violet blossoms of Grand Rapids was the first of the season. The first of the season was the first of the season. The first of the season was the first of the season.

The race was too fast, and before they got to the third mile they were in the wrong class, but it was too late to retrieve the loss. The race was too fast, and before they got to the third mile they were in the wrong class.

The case grows out of a refusal on the part of the poor condition of the road. The toll gate keeper was finally obliged to stop Pass from driving on the roads. Pass upon being told he could not go through the toll gate, he refused to pay the toll.

SAN SING'S SAD PLIGHT. JERSEY MOSQUITOES BOTHER HIM MORE THAN LEPROSY. A Question That is of Great Interest to the Inhabitants of Snake Hill—The Lepers' Attempt to Escape—Fed Like a Wild Beast.

New York, Oct. 14.—Can leprosy be transmitted by mosquitoes? That is, if a mosquito sucks the blood of a leper and then lights on a healthy man and sucks the same person's blood, can he be used on the leper, is there any danger of transmitting the disease to the healthy man? The man who answers that question will save a load from the minds of the 100 persons who have to live on Snake Hill, N. J., and will earn their everlasting thankfulness if he answers it in the negative, while if he answers it in the affirmative he will create a panic in the like of which they have never been seen. Snake Hill is overrun with mosquitoes. It towers right up in the middle of a swamp, which is the breeding ground of at least half the mosquitoes in Hudson county. Last year a man named Sam Sing came to the attention of the little pests so that he abandoned them. They have been particularly thick the past season.

Sam Sing the Harrison leper, is considered the worst case of leprosy in the county. The mosquitoes have troubled him more than his disease. When they get through with him they go off and suck the blood of healthy victims through the same process that they go through with him. It is estimated that 1,000 persons at the hill argue that if leprosy is contagious, no better way of transmitting it could be found than by the breeding of one of these mosquitoes. The people of the town are now breeding a mosquito, as they would a rattlesnake and a band of the pests have more than one occasion taken to the hills. Sam Sing came to the attention of the little pests so that he abandoned them.

The case grows out of a refusal on the part of the poor condition of the road. The toll gate keeper was finally obliged to stop Pass from driving on the roads. Pass upon being told he could not go through the toll gate, he refused to pay the toll.
