THE LOWER CLASSES VERY BITTER AGAINST THIS COUNTRY.

The Excitement All Over the Country Is Intense and Important Political Events May Flow From the Affairs-The Bet-ter Classes are Satisfied.

New York, Jan. 28.—The Herald's Santiago correspondent says there is intense excitement in that city and much anxiety is felt as to the reply of the United States to the note sent by Minister Legation. Nothing else has been discussed in the clubs or in the streets for the past twenty-four hours.

The supporters of the Halmaceo government are growing over the manner in which this matter has been conducted by the present government, and are doing all they can to inflame the people.

In Valparaiso the matter is being discussed in a calmer manner, merchants and bankers generally believing that a peaceful settlement of the pending difficulty will be reached.

Intense excitement prevails over the entire continent, and the north and south provinces are constantly arriving, asking if the question has been settled. The Peruvian residents of Iquique are jubilant over the existing state of affairs, and the people of that place are brought up to a high pitch.

In Santiago and Valparaiso the papers print the wild stories relative to the ultimatum, La Union being especially excited, calling upon the people to stand together and uphold the honor of the country. La Union says, in regard to the story current that the United States has offered an ultimatum to the Strip: "Our nobles sailors would prefer sinking to the bottom of the sea than salute the Yankee flag."

It is regarded as strange that the exact terms of Chile's reply are not generally known, and it is thought that the papers are keeping them back. La Union prints a letter from an Englishman advising the government of all diplomatic and consular relations with the United States.

The majority of the intelligent people, however, look upon the withdrawal of the demand of the Chilean government for the recall of Minister Egan and regard to an apology with favor.

It is reported that the cabinet is much divided with the counsel of Pedro Nonti, the Chilean minister at Washington. It is said that the cabinet yesterday, assured his government that the affair was coming to a favorable result. The cabinet is divided, and his advisers believe that Mr. Haine was desirous of making an agreement with the United States. Some here think that Pedro Monti was posted by Richard Turnbull, British minister and their Democratic friends.

"The excuse made for the demand for the recall of Minister Egan is that it was understood that he had cabled Secretary Blaine that the Chilean government had decided to retract the demand, and then recalled them. It is said that he never made such a statement, but that Secretary Blaine had the government had given tacit consent to their removal, and this cannot be denied."

The Postmaster has been ordered by the minister of justice to proceed at once to collect the trial of the case in the Baltimore case and to drop everything else. Judge Foster promises that he will finish that trial by Friday.

There is a great deal of talk about the question of Chile and Argentina on the Pacific side of the continent, and the newspapers saying that Argentina wants ports on the Pacific side of the continent, which Chile is unwilling to grant.

The purchase of the cruiser now in the harbor to the United States by the Chilean government, is reported.

A Young Bridegroom's Embarrassing Experience at the Board of Trade.

A day or two ago, a few minutes before the opening of the board of trade, there stepped into one of the elevators in the building a well known commission merchant in connection with the board of trade.

He was a young, fresh, open, unpolished looking chap, who in connection with the board of trade, had been in the elevator for the first time looking after his business for the night, and this is a sort of a bridal trip.

Congratulations were extended by the commission man as they stepped out into the hall leading to the exchange. Among the others who rode up in the elevator was a certain blonde young man whose name was not recalled, but who was rather famous on the floor. He had changed to stand back to back with the young countryman, had overheard the confidential admission made by him to his friend, and as they stepped from the elevator he managed to get a good look at Mr. Youngblood.

An hour or so later, when he had a few moments to himself, he stepped over to the telephone counter and wrote upon a blank sheet of paper the name of the young man who had just married. He wrote: "Do you win my bet? This is folded and placed in an envelope, and handed to a messenger, and he delivered the message.

He told a few of his cronies on the floor what he had done, and the young countryman was watched with considerable interest by a dozen or twenty traders in various parts of the crowd. He was a little nervous, and he was a half-doubting look, opened it slowly, and as he comprehended its contents his foolish smile lifted the corners of his mouth.

He looked about him sheepishly to see if he could discover the author of the message and then he rather precipitately retired. He failed to put in an appearance at the board of trade, and the author of the note said to the young man's broker if he had said anything about it.

"Yes, he did, and he was the most surprised man you ever saw. He could not imagine where the note came from, and when he said goodly to me he obliged me with the name of the man who told me that he had said anything about it. I don't wonder that he can see it in his mind, and he is a good deal smarter than I am. He sent me a little bit of a note, and he went home with it."

A City Four-o'Clock.

"It is just 4 o'clock," remarked a gentleman standing on the steps of the Astor House.

"No, it isn't," said a friend who stood near him with his hand to his eye, "but watch, makes it a quarter after 4, and I only had it yesterday."

A bet was made between the two men that the clock would show it was just 4 o'clock, as any one who is acquainted with the movements of Dr. Jekyll would certainly have known.

It is well known that the very solid deviates a minute in the time that he reaches the Astor House. He always leaves his office at 4:25 o'clock p. m. and strolls leisurely up to the Astor House.

The regularity with which he reaches his place, is such that he is always expected to be there, and he prides himself upon it. He says that all his movements have a close clock-like precision as does his appearance.

HINTS FROM A BURGLAR.

An Interview with a Man Who Does Housebreaking.

He Catly Tells the Man Who Shot at Him Why He Does His Work, and How He Works in a Robbing House.

Some time ago the house of Henry Kahn, on Home avenue, was entered by burglars. Mr. Kahn, lying in bed, with a bullseye flashing in his forehead, called out to the burglars, and they left the premises without carrying anything with them. "I read in the papers of the capture of a gang of burglars," remarked Mr. Kahn, and concluded to ask the man who had done the burglary to see if he would be willing to tell me some of his experiences.

"I was one of the burglars," said the man, who had done the burglary, and he told me some of his experiences. He was one of the burglars, and he told me some of his experiences. He was one of the burglars, and he told me some of his experiences.

"Do you think you ever saw me before?" I asked him. "No," he answered. "I don't remember," I suggested. "Oh," said he, with some appearance of interest, "You are the man who shot at me last night, and you are the man who shot at me last night, and you are the man who shot at me last night."

"No," he said, "I don't remember." "Oh," said he, "I don't remember." "Oh," said he, "I don't remember." "Oh," said he, "I don't remember."

Fatigue of Metals.
The question of the fatigue of metals under long continued stress has been tested, and it is believed, satisfied by the results of the tests. The results of similar suspension bridge links and the results obtained. A square iron link 1 1/2 inches wide, 1 inch thick and about 12 feet long was tested by the method of Kieff, Russia, then about forty years old, and tested against a similar link which had been used in the building of the bridge. Under these circumstances the means of comparison were considered in the highest degree, and the result was a result of a reliable character in determining whether or not iron actually loses, and if so, how much, of its strength in prolonged service.

The effect of the test showed for the old used link an ultimate tensile strength of 70 tons per square inch, at the point of fracture. In the case of the unused link, the tensile strength was found to be 22.2 tons per square inch, with an elastic limit of 11.1 tons per square inch, an elongation of 14.5 per cent, and a contraction of 17.5 per cent, at the point of fracture. In the case of the unused link, the tensile strength was found to be 22.2 tons per square inch, with an elastic limit of 11.1 tons per square inch, an elongation of 14.5 per cent, and a contraction of 17.5 per cent, at the point of fracture.
