

THE THEATERS.

Charles T. Ellis, in "Casper the Yodler," filled the benches of the opera house completely last night. The boxes were crowded and standing room could not be purchased. The play, which has been seen here a number of times, is a musical comedy-drama somewhat after the style of "The Yodler."

SONS OF THE COVENANT.

THEIR DISTRICT CONVENTION BEING HELD IN THIS CITY. Maurice M. Roseman, Unanimously Chosen President, over Officers Elected and Installed at the Opera House.

The twenty-fourth annual convention of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith or Sons of the Covenant, was held at order at K. P. Hall in the Kennedy block yesterday morning by President Leon Schlossman of Chicago.

The afternoon session convened at 2:30 and a great deal of time was taken up in reading telegrams from delegates who could not be present. Reports were also read from special committees, and the fore part of the session was consumed in routine business.

After the routine business had been disposed of the president announced that the next order of business was the nomination and election of officers. D. M. Roseman, of this city, was elected president and J. H. Bondy, of Chicago, was nominated for first vice president and was elected without a dissenting vote.

The first vice president, in a good oratorical display, placed in nomination for Grand Master of the district, J. H. Bondy, of Chicago, and the nomination was unanimously confirmed. The balance of the officers were elected as follows: Treasurer—S. Markus, Chicago.

After an investigation of the matter the corner concluded that death was caused by lead poisoning. The body was turned over to Undertaker K. H. Bondy, of this city, who had ceased was about 44 years old, a single man and a member of the A. O. U. of New York city. His death was reported by a member who has been notified and is being ordered his burial as they wish tomorrow morning from St. Andrew's cathedral.

More Bonds to be Issued—Change of Text Books—Library Clerks' Wages. At the regular session of the board of directors of the Grand Rapids Public Library, held on Monday last, the following resolutions were adopted: That the board of directors be authorized to issue $100,000 of bonds for the purpose of purchasing new text books for the library.

HORRIBLE HOTEL FIRE!

ONE HUNDRED LIVES BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN LOST. The Hotel York, New York, burned yesterday morning at unknown number of guests and employees burned or buried in the ruins.

New York, Feb. 7.—An appalling disaster occurred at Fortieth street and Sixth avenue this morning by the burning of the Hotel York. A number of people were burned, suffocated and crushed in the ruins. One hundred and twenty guests are known to have been in the hotel and the employees numbered fifty-five. Of these, six were found dead, six are in hospitals and sixty-three are reported alive. This leaves 100 missing and they are supposed to be dead in the ruins.

The fire was composed of several old buildings and the flames, which started at the front elevator in the basement, spread rapidly and in fifteen minutes the whole six stories were ablaze. There were many narrow escapes and many desperate fights against death on the part of the imprisoned inmates. The fire was extinguished by the firemen who were gathered up unconscious, burned, and in great pain.

Two men and two women jumped from the upper story and were dashed to their deaths. The fire was extinguished by the firemen who were gathered up unconscious, burned, and in great pain.

CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS.

An Effort Spent of One Hundred Miles to be Executed by the First Air-Line Railroad. Chicago, Feb. 7.—The engineer corps of the Chicago & St. Louis Electric Railway company, consisting of Tyre C. Hughes, chief engineer, and Messrs. E. A. Gull, W. A. Grady, E. T. Lorton and C. T. Elliott, left St. Louis yesterday to make the survey of the proposed route of the road. This will be the first, and not before in the history of civil engineering has such a long line been run.

GRAND RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

It is very evident that for the present at least the board of directors of the Grand River Improvement association...

In this connection a profitable lesson may be drawn perhaps from the most recent of the little creeks of Brunswick Georgia. The city possessed a magnificent harbor, but a rocky bar at the mouth made it inaccessible for the huge ocean-going steamers.

There was a big demand and a large supply of the creek bed was dug as deep as the water level...

Well, while I was standing on the bank of the Doc and Tom, the boss came and told me that the next morning at nine o'clock and they would run logs that day and then they would stop for a week...

When I got there the creek was as dry as a bone and the men were setting on the bank swapping lies. Frisky some heard some whoppers, and the men said the water was coming and it wasn't long before the logs were floating down the stream...

When the water came it was as if it had been raining for a week. It was so high that it was all water and everything was as lively as business war all over the country just as if it had been raining for a week...

CANADIAN RECIPROcity: Whatever may be his views upon the abstract questions of free trade and protection, no one can question the present advantages of reciprocity.

The benefits of reciprocity which are so obvious in the trade with so small a country as Cuba would be a thousand fold greater in the trade of so great and so prosperous a country as Canada.

and put into smooth and successful operation. Mr. Blaine's fame as a statesman will be amply satisfied, though he should never be present.

It may now be expected that at their next meeting the board of police commissioners will pass resolutions exonerating and whitewashing Guy Johnson. While they have apparently already noted him to freedom of the city report that they will present him with the key to the municipality in a golden box is probably a canard.

The Kansas City papers are trying to secure the People's party national convention, urging that it will compare favorably in popularity with the Democratic national gathering which the lively city on the "Big Muddy" failed to capture.

HOMELY ECONOMICS.

[BY HEAD THINKEP.] A few days ago I heard a man say he couldn't pay a bill until he had made some collections, and the parties owning him had got to make collections before they could pay him.

Anybody that has been in the lumber business knows its mighty trick putting his logs in a small creek. They get 'em in the creek all right but he takes water to float 'em. Up in Oscola county there is a creek called the "Doc and Tom." The old fellow where I stopped said it was named after "Doc" Blodgett and "Tom" Simpson, because they owned the land along the creek. I suppose the old fellow didn't know he wouldn't steal pine from the government.

Juvenile Purchasers. One of the most striking features in the poorer regions of the city is the early age at which children are made useful in the household. In my rambles about town I have seen children—poor, underfed, children two- or four and five years of age carrying milk, meat, groceries, etc., to their parents' homes.

The little white child top opened a chubby and very fat and displayed four cents. Whereupon the butcher, his diamond pin sparkling in the rays of his bright cleaver, opened to a fragment of bones and gristle and threw in a chunk of fat.

A Doubtful Compliment. A man who was selling rugs stopped at a house on Howard street, at the corner of the city.

"G'mornin," said the man. "Can I sell you a rug today?" "No, you can't sell me anything," snubbed the woman.

"S'ry," murmured the man as he folded the rug. "That's a powerful sight of dust you've got on that rug." "I've swept the whole house," retorted the woman. "I'm every day I clean the sweepin'."

"That pile of dust. My wife could sweep for a month and not get such a pile of dust as that." "She was flattered, and looked at his rug, with the result that she bought a pair of them and he went away like a duck under water.

Famous Abductions. Marriage by abduction was of old times unaccounted in the early ages. The daughter of a Phoenician; the Greeks carried off Europa from Tyre and Medea from Colchis.

Next to the abduction of the fair Helen, perhaps the most remarkable in its political consequences was the King of Lothar's carrying away of the wife of a neighboring petty sovereign, O'Rourke of Brefny.

The king of Connaught avenged the insult of Lothar, who appealed to Henry II of England for aid to recover his sovereignty. The Norman conquest of Ireland followed, with long centuries of war and devastation.

Roman Coins as Fodder. In the Madras museum it is to be seen a couple of such fragments scattered in its menageries between the tamers of wild beasts and their more or less docile pupils. A chemist proposes that a man should be strapped to the cage armed with a syringe of large dimensions filled with caustic ammonia, a stream of which is to be projected toward the nostrils of the beast in case of imminent danger.

The Department of Agriculture. Representative Jerry Simpson has had referred to the committee on rules the following interesting resolution: Whereas the department has come to that degree of national importance that its head office has reached the dignified position of a cabinet office, and hence a constituent in the view of the president, and Whereas President Harrison, in his late message to congress, referring to this branch of the public service, said: "The department of agriculture was reorganized by any one as a mere concession to the unsatisfied demands of a worthy class of people, that impression has been most effectively removed by the great results already attained."

Whereas there have arisen in the minds of several of that "worthy class of people," known as titlers of the soil, grave and important questions in connection with the interest of American agriculture in the interest of American agriculture, and whereas the reasons of these words are so prevalent that prominent agricultural data concerning the growing and harvesting have been furnished to boards of trade, chambers of commerce, and to the press, and whereas the department is made a harbor for a large number of such persons and papers to employ clerks, to administer oaths, to take testimony and to make investigations and to disseminate their conclusions to the public well; therefore it Resolved, That a committee of five members of the house of representatives be appointed to investigate the purpose of the department in the interest of the department, and to report thereon to the house of representatives at the next session of the department.

The State Agricultural College. Georgia is carrying on agricultural instruction on aggressive lines. This was first done by the University trustees last August. The circular issued by the lecturers says: Many scientific truths would be of great value to our farmers whose experience has impressed them with their necessity and value. But it is impracticable for them to attend the college for the purpose of learning these. The college now proposes to bring them to you. We propose to hold these "farmers' institutes" on the premises of the college, and to have the college professors to come to you instead of having you come to the college.

There are earnestly solicited your presence and sympathy. You will not be benefited if you stay at home. Perhaps you are not so well as you think you are, and you may find out some of the reasons why you failed, and be able to do better. Come, let us reason together. In a few days we will be in your midst. It is for your good, not ours, that we are coming. We ask the hearty cooperation of the Alliance, the League of Farmers' Clubs, of every farmer.

Dates for meetings in seven towns are announced, and it is said the work is to be carried on in every county in the district, and thousands of farmers who cannot go to the meetings of the State Agricultural College will be benefited by the instruction of agriculture discussed from a practical and scientific standpoint.

The Antislavery Bill. The Omaha World-Herald interviewed a number of the prominent men in Nebraska on the subject of the antislavery bill. Here are some of the opinions expressed: Alliance President Fowler—I am in favor of the antislavery law, but I believe that the gambling and fictitious dealing in grain tend to lower prices. Grain prices are low, and that should be, and I want to see them raised.

Senator Van Wyck—Grain gambling should be stopped. If the Washburne bill is passed, it will be a great benefit to the farmer, and it will be a great benefit to the farmer, and it will be a great benefit to the farmer.

Governor Thayer—I have not yet read the bill, but I am opposed to every species of gambling, and I believe that the gambling and fictitious dealing in grain, it makes people into speculation and speculation is the worst enemy that a farmer has.

Everybody should hear W. F. Abrams on the subject of the antislavery bill. This week at 7 P. M., 915 South Division street.

Money. EDITOR MORNING PRESS—In an article headed "Money," by J. Rogers Rees, copied from Sunday at Home by the Young Peoples Weekly, I find this sentence: "It has not only crushed the souls of men's natures and shriveled their spirits," and I wish to make a practical application under what circumstances "Money" has become a vicious influence charged to it in the quotation.

Of course the nature of the man in possession of money has something to do with the influence that it has over him, but the circumstances under which he has acquired a great deal to do with it. The men who have acquired great fortunes themselves are of course generally supposed to be best qualified to write essays or deliver lectures on "Success in Business," or "How to Get Rich" and kindred subjects. But while such men often speak their discourses, some with a sprinkling of good, wholesome advice, the main line of their advice, often, is to get rich, and to get rich by the use of large and crampy natures and shriveled souls who heed it.

The advice that should be given young men on that subject is that all who entertain a desire to enjoy the advantages of riches should as a matter of right endeavor to merit riches. That is they should try to invent something useful, or to get at the head of whatever trade or profession or business enterprise they may choose to take up, so as to produce or do something so desirable to their fellow men that they will be liberally and remuneratively patronized, so that their patrons will feel that they are getting something for their money they part with, however large the amount may be.

But the main line of the advice that wealthy men generally give young men on that subject is to invest every dollar they have in stocks, bonds, mortgages, or other interest bearing securities that will always be tempted to seek the ruin of business and the oppressing of the poor, for their interest as such becomes confined to the money they are engaged in any honest activity or in any useful enterprise, because in the latter it is best to be able to easily obtain money at a low rate of interest. And to have business or property to be sold at a low price for their labor, or for whatever they may have to do. But for all money they have, they must have it in a form that they can readily liquidate, that is, they must have it in a form that is convertible into cash at any time.

Those who simply tend to individuals are somewhat interested yet in having business prosperous enough to encourage liberal investment in stocks, bonds, mortgages, or other securities, but this leads to increase the demand for money, but even that is not absolutely sufficient to their property, for the money is only scarce enough so that the supply is considerably less than the demand, and this leads to a high rate of interest without property in business, and a scarcity of supply has even this advantage to them over a liberal demand created by prosperity in business, that a scant supply, while it tends to make business high, it tends also to make wealthy money-lenders in a double ratio—increase their incomes and decreasing their expenses.

But to those who have large investments in stocks, bonds, mortgages, or other securities, it is especially beneficial to have business greatly depressed, because that, of course, tends to reduce wages and salaries of all the help they have to employ directly, and of all the labor that is in any business, and to make everything very cheap, and thus to greatly diminish their expenses in the maintenance of their property. So if there is any policy that has a tendency to bring about that condition in business, it is not rich to be a Christian or any other person to place himself in a position where there is a high rate of interest, something that tends to induce large masses of poverty, by depriving them of an opportunity to find work to do, or of a comfortable living at a useful enterprise. High interest and low wages is never more injurious to the laborer than it is beneficial to money-lenders, because, while it benefits the money lender in a double ratio, it injures the laborer in a double ratio.

It increases the laborer's expenses—for even though he has to pay no interest in directly, yet a portion of the interest that any producer of whatever he consumes has to pay is added to the cost of those commodities, and the income is not alone diminished by the wages that a scarcity of money causes, but the wages and the cost of the commodities go together. As a general thing the lower wages are, the more time is lost in the production of the commodities as a whole, because the more men are idling for work the cheaper they are to employ.

Workers labor under this additional disadvantage, that when they find least work to do, they are the least able to do something for themselves, because then they have the least money with which to purchase materials to do with, and then, too, they are obliged to spend their time in hunting for work.

When a man invests his money and time in some manufacturing or producing or mercantile enterprise, or occupation, he of course desires to make money as fast as possible. That is natural; but he then fares the best when the whole country is unemployed, for then he has the greatest degree of monopoly, and he is able to sell his goods at a higher price than he can when there is a large supply of goods on the market.

A CATTLE FUNERAL.

How the wild herds of the prairies mourn a death. A leader sniffs a croaking caw from afar and but for the grave, followed by the following herd—creatures come from all directions.

A cattle funeral may seem an odd thing to write about, but it is ten times more so to witness. If the observer happens to be on foot in the vicinity of the scene of the ceremony, however, he need find it anything but odd, unless he be a new or somewhat inexperienced observer, or the curious onlooker be unusually fleet of foot.

But doubtless the average reader does not know what a cattle funeral is like, and perhaps is not inclined to give credit to the possible existence of such a thing if he has never seen it. In reality, however, cattle of a more or less untamed disposition are wont to range, he will certainly never have had an opportunity to learn by observation any of the peculiar and notable facts connected with this remarkable phenomenon of the range.

It is generally the most liberal when he is most prosperous. But when the money lender sets high interest rates, he demoralizes his income the most by being generous, and the interest he receives most by being miserly. When interest is highest and labor the lowest then money lenders absorb the greatest amount of other people's labor, and are the most oppressive. When interest is low and labor high then money lenders absorb the least amount of other people's labor, and are the least oppressive.

It will be seen that money lenders are always a dangerous element in society. It is when money is used for the purpose of lending to other people, rather than when it is used directly by its owner that it most tends to "cramp" the industry and stifle the growth of the country. Herein is probably found the philosophy of the Bible in so many instances where it is said that the word of the Lord is "cramp" the industry and stifle the growth of the country.

Then let the twenty-four hours, or even less, be passed in such a manner that cattle within a mile or less of the time of the slaughter. But for the purpose of illustration suppose that twenty-four hours have elapsed.

Then suppose a lot of one or two hundred head of cattle come drifting down toward the slaughter with the modern interpretation of the word "loosey," are left to grope about in total darkness until they are driven to the slaughter by the producers, and how many people are often deprived of an opportunity to secure remunerative employment because of the maneuverings of money lenders to secure high rates of interest.

Reading Clay with His Feet. One of the oddest features in the process of making glass is the construction of the "pots" or crucibles in which the molten glass is melted and ready for the blowpipe. These pots, which are dome shaped, about four feet high and half a yard in diameter, are made of a material which is principally imported from Germany, although an article has been discovered in the state of Missouri.

Great Minds Run in the Same Channel. The approach of fly time suggested an idea to a man in Nebraska for a cow tail holder. A clamp like a clothespin catches the end of the tail and two cords with a snap attachment fasten the tail to a cow's leg, so as to prevent the tail from getting in the way.

Where Woman Finds Her Advantage.

Whatever disadvantages a woman lawyer may be under in the practice of her profession, she has certain compensating advantages which her brethren do not have. A little incident in the chambers part of the supreme court the other day will illustrate this point.

A modest looking, neatly dressed young woman came into the court room with some legal papers in her hand. She walked up to the rail, while the clerk quickly came forward, all attention. He took the papers which she carried and handed them to the judge immediately, while the court officers hustled around and brought her a chair.

Education in Switzerland. The system of education in practice among the Swiss is enlightened and far reaching. Not only is the child sent to school, but he is also made to feel that the warning and protecting care of his parents is over him, and that he is the child in the street he has passed from the circle of his home, and that he is a member of the community.

Two Birthdays. There are two Brooklyn women, warm friends, whose ages are the same, their birthdays even falling upon the same day. They had passed thirty and were not yet forty, and one of them had made up her mind that she never would be forty. At last came the fourth birthday.

Many Commonplace People. It takes absolute self reliance and not a little courage for a chap to make the effort to do what he has to do, when a project presents itself to him. A majority of us is not only to desire to want things shape themselves to our wishes, but we insist upon making that wish. The man who says "I'll do it," and keeps his word, is phenomenal; the one who makes the promise and tries to keep it, is common.

Proper Pride. Of course he felt it his duty to tell her that she was the first girl he had ever kissed. "Oh, sorry to hear you say that," she said. "You can't compare me with other girls—and I'm sure the comparison won't be in my favor."—Indianapolis Journal.
