THE NATIONAL GAME.

A great deal is said about the special attractions of this, and the other leading sport of the day. The turfman thinks there is nothing approaching the hortivated excitement of a horse race, which from the start to the finish occupies but a few minutes of time. The rover regards a three-mile "hull" race as the best sporting opportunity available, while the yachtman looks upon all other contests of trifling importance with that ending in the winning of his club regatta cup; and so on.

It is to the introduction of baseball as a national pastime, in fact, that the growth of athletic sports in general is largely due, and that it has taught Americans the value of physical culture as an important aid to perfect work in cultivating the mind up to its highest point.

A New Game of Checkers.

Checkers players are interested in a new game that is played by two persons with seven checkers each, arranged at each end of the board. The object of the player is to get each of his checkers into one of the squares of the opposite king row before his opponent can do the same thing. A checker that has reached any square of the opposite king row cannot be moved. Should the game become so blocked that only one player can move, he must remove all his pieces and the game is a draw.
