COCONUT TREES.

THEY ARE GROWN VERY SUCCESSFULLY IN SOUTH FLORIDA.

Although introduced only sixteen years ago, the tree could not now do very well without them—some of the Many Trees the Coconut is fit to.

While the coconut tree abounds in the South Florida it is not a native of the section nor has the fruit been cultivated here for any great length of time. About sixteen years ago a Bahama vessel was wrecked off the coast, near Jupiter inlet. Soon after the waves began bringing the cargo ashore among which were found a large number of coconuts. Residents were very few in this section at that time but they gathered together and appropriated whatever came to them.

These coconuts were considered great prizes and were at once planted. The soil was found to be favorable to the growth and they thrived wonderfully. Thus was introduced the culture of the nut upon the soil of the North American continent. In Dade county, one of the southernmost counties of the state, which has a sea front of 150 miles, the coconut has been found growing in patches from 100 to 6,000 trees.

Coconut culture is very simple. The ripe nut is plucked from the tree and the outer husk that surrounds it is put under ground, lightly covered with soil. The first shoot should make its appearance in one month after planting, but is often two before it comes. When it is about a foot high it is transplanted to its permanent resting place. If the nut is planted as a nursery stock the husk is left on, as the young plant is very tender, and it seems that a growth out of the husk has a tendency to make strong the root joints. If it be first planted where it is to remain the husk is usually removed.

For the first year the plant requires careful protection from the winds, but it gradually grows hardy, and at the end of six years begins bearing. The blooms make their appearance a dozen or more together, looking like grains of corn strung on wire about a foot in length. These grains are young nuts.

They ripen in a year's time, and thereafter until its death the tree is never without fruit in various stages of ripeness, from a tiny lobed and pointed nut to the ripe nut, and there is not a day in the year when the ripe nuts cannot be secured. It has been demonstrated in other countries that the coconut tree will bear fruit for twenty-five years. To what age they live has not been ascertained.

The trees make a most beautiful and imposing grove, being truly tropical in their appearance. As they are planted a thick, unvarying shade. They are evergreen, as is most tropical foliage, and their growth, with the great height they attain, makes them a desirable addition to a home in the far south. The diameter of the tree ranges from one foot to four, and they attain a height of 100 feet, bearing as many as 400 nuts on them at one time.

The old-fashioned method of grating the nut has been superseded by the use of the coconut press, the residents of the southern country keep on hand for their use a fresh supply of homemade dedicated coconuts, from which various foodstuffs are prepared. The product is becoming more generally known by reason of its excellent flavor, and the "olefin," a strong fibrous bark, that grows far above the ground and is utilized in many ways. If the use of coconut butter ever becomes common the extract of a grove of three trees will see its fortune altered. The butter is made from the oil of the nut, expressed by machinery.

Even the raw grated nut is an excellent substitute for "shortening" in bread, but substituted for lard. The cooking process seems to destroy entirely the vegetable taste and appearance, and biscuit made with it is as pronounced as the best made with cream biscuit.

Shorn of its coconut growth, a tropical country would certainly be less attractive in appearance. The long, feathery leaves that undulate so gracefully in the breeze which sighs among them, the "everlasting green" that coloring their fall, and the symmetry beautify the whole country where they grow—especially the south Florida country, where they grow in each profusion.—St. Louis Republic.

Paris Has Thousands of Trees. Statistics show that the parks and gardens in Paris number not less than 299,294 shrubs and 23,038 flower trees. The number of trees which line the streets is considerably over 100,000.

The Objection to Sterilized Milk. All methods of sterilization that are in use in this country have the disadvantage of giving to the milk the taste which is peculiar to boiled milk, and of rendering it less easily absorbed by the body. In France and Germany a method has been adopted which accomplishes the purpose without impairing the taste of the milk.—Professor H. W. Conn in Popular Science Monthly.

Cause of Winter's Coldness. The earth is nearer to the sun in winter than in summer, but the cause of the cold weather of the former season is the oblique inclination of the sun's rays. WILL WIN IN GEORGIA

IT CERTAINLY LOOKS AS THOUGH THAT STATE WILL BE CARRIED.

The Third Party Movement Has Made Tremendous Advancement in Georgia Since the Close of the St. Louis Convention—An Impartial Review.

The state of the political atmosphere in Georgia has been learned from the following condensation of a dispatch to the New York World:

If any doubt existed as to the strength of the People's party in the state of Georgia it will be removed when the action of the recent meetings throughout the state becomes known. The third party, as it is popularly called here, is a force not to be despised in Georgia politics, but must be respected as an antagonist which will require earnest work to defeat.

Since the adjournment of the St. Louis convention under the direct leadership of the Alliance, Colonel C. P. Post, late delegate to St. Louis, Senator Ellington and Representative M. J. Branch have been canvassing this state. The result of their labors was the call which brought together county meetings all over the state.

It happened that the first convention, that of Polk county, called to elect delegates to the state Democratic convention, was to meet the same day. While that convention assembled as a Democratic body, it passed resolutions adopting the Omaha platform in full independence of the old parties.

It then reassembled under the name of the People's party convention, with Major Blanc, chairman of the Democratic meeting, as its most conspicuous member. The same old faces appeared all the way through.

In Cherokee county the third party organization with such prominent Democrats as Colonel W. H. Parkinson, the Rev. Andrew D. Dobbs and Captain W. W. Wilson taking the leading parts. They resolved to take charge of everything in sight from congressmen to bullies.

In Jefferson, Hart, Monroe, Forsyth, Burke, Carroll and many other counties the meetings were large and enthusiastic. Though there was an absence in many of them of well known names, yet the people present were those who do the voting, and their determination was apparent.

One of the most notable incidents of the day was in Burke county. In that county the negroes count as three to one white man. It is one of those typical places in the south where extraordinary means have had to be taken to keep in line an overwhelming negro majority.

It is the last place in the south in which a northern man would expect to find brotherhood between the races, yet at the third party meeting in Waynesboro there were no distinctions of color, one white—acting in perfect harmony.

The St. Louis platform was adopted, the work of organization was perfected and the election of the county militia districts completed. At the conclusion of the meeting three cheers for Congressman Watson were given in which black and white vied as to who could shout the loudest.

The Democrats of Spalding county, in session to discuss party matters, acknowledged the strength of the third party. To judge from some of the members' views, who are evidently in position to know, this party is more formidable than most people are willing to admit.

In order that no third party party get into the deliberations on May 15, Colonel E. W. Hammond introduced a resolution that the election be by primaries, while Colonel Frank Flint, a known Democrat, proposed that no known Democrats should be allowed to vote in said primary.

During the discussion of these resolutions it developed that this new party has a much larger hold than is generally conceded. Colonel Frank Flint proposed that no known Democrats should be allowed to vote in said primary.

Judge Stewart said: "There is a great effort and we underestimate the strength of it, to break down the Democratic party in the south. No longer than yesterday at the dinner table in Fayetteville, the present representative of Fayette county told me that the Constitution stated after Livingston returned from St. Louis and made his speech at Covington, that it was all right. Livingston had killed the third party in Georgia."

They simply got the cart before the horse; the third party is alive and Livingston is dead.

In Campbell county, Senator Ellington generally looked upon as the third party candidate for the governorship, addressed a large audience.

In Rockdale Colonel Peck addressed an assembly of 500 people in advocacy of third partyism. At the conclusion of his speech the audience by a two-thirds vote endorsed his position.

In the face of all this it may be asked, What is the Democracy to do? Plenty of Governorial Timbers in Kansas. The remarkable part of the preliminary canvass by the third party for governor of Kansas is that there are no self announced candidates on the list, for the office must seek the man and not the man seek the office.

Those who do the voting, and their determination was apparent. One of the most notable incidents of the day was in Burke county. In that county the negroes count as three to one white man. It is one of those typical places in the south where extraordinary means have had to be taken to keep in line an overwhelming negro majority.

OLD IRONSIDES.

HISTORY OF ONE OF THE OLD SHIPS IN THE AMERICAN NAVY.

Dismantled in a Modern Navy Yard. She was the Object of Profound Veneration on the Part of Patriot Heroes of Today, Who Are Proud of Her.

Not many people may know that the old frigate Constitution, so renowned in our annals, is still included among the ships of the navy. She is dismantled, as might be expected at her age, and is kept in that condition at Portsmouth, N. H. She is a craft of 2,200 tons displacement, and now carries no battery in place of the forty-four guns of the days of her glory.

It was the Constitution that, after the insipid opening on land of our war with Great Britain, eighty years ago, led off a series of splendid victories on the sea. The hour of the first capture of a British war vessel undoubtedly belongs to the Essex, Captain David Porter, whose defeat of the Alert occurred six days before the Constitution destroyed the Guerriere.

But the Essex carried thirty-two 32-pounders and the Alert only twenty 18-pounders, so that very soon after opening fire the crew of the little British frigate, which, having captured one of our transports, had made up to the Essex, taking her to be a merchantman, were compelled to quit their guns and within eight minutes to strike their flag. This, however, after such gratifying, was inevitable, whereas that of the Constitution was gained over a craft nearer her own size and strength.

But while yielding the laurels of priority to the gallant Essex on this score, the Constitution, under Captain Isaac Hull, can claim them again for herself in a trial of seamanship between herself and a British sloop. Till then affairs were looking gloomy for us at sea, as well as on land. The British frigate Belvidere, while conveying a fleet of merchantmen had escaped from a whole squadron of our warships, where as our Nautilus had struck to an English squadron, being the first warship captured on either side.

Under circumstances the Constitution, returning from Europe, fell in with the British squadron led by the Africa, a 46-gun ship. During four days she was chased by this squadron. Through calm and through breeze the fight and pursuit went on. At one time she had boats overtaking her; at another her crew were hauling upon a keel anchor that had been carried out and dropped a long distance ahead. On the fourth day she loosed for wind came, and with every sail set the Constitution drew away from her pursuers, the scene when five English ships were standing on the same tack and the Constitution was showing her heels to her enemies being often recalled.

But in our time, of course, the fame of the Constitution is more familiarly associated with her capture of the Guerriere. It was on Aug. 19, 1812, that the two vessels met, both eager for a fight. The scene was off the coast of Massachusetts. The British craft, commanded by the gallant Decres, was first to open fire, but Hull maneuvered his vessel into the right position before he replied. The scene was off the coast of Massachusetts. The British craft, commanded by the gallant Decres, was first to open fire, but Hull maneuvered his vessel into the right position before he replied.

That same year the Constitution, under Bainbridge, gained another great victory over the Java, off the coast of Brazil. The Java, like her predecessor, was a 38-gun ship, and in the battle she lost foremast and mizzenmast, besides a part of her bowsprit; while, to compare the parallel, the Guerriere, she was so wrecked in the fight that she had to be blown up. It was a great exhibition of good seamanship and superior gunnery on the part of the American vessel; for, as Cooper says, "the Java had been literally picked to pieces by shot, spar following spar, until she had no one left." Her loss in killed and wounded was very heavy.

Finally, in 1815, under command of Commodore Stewart, the famous old ship made a double capture of the British frigate Cyane and sloop Levant. Old Ironsides, as she had come to be called during the war, was launched at Boston in 1797; and who knows but when the hundredth anniversary of that event comes around she may again be put into commission, so as to receive centennial honors?—New York Sun.

A Novel Use of Electric Fans. The little electric motor and the swiftly revolving fan are familiar objects, and many a heated brow has been cooled by their combination. But the electric fan has recently found its way into a strange place, none other than the turbines of the powerful iron mountain locomotives, where the company has placed four of its perfected fan outfits. These are not, as might be supposed, to cool the engines, but to blow away the smoke from the guns. This certainly is a novel use for the electric fan.—Electricity.

A VERY OLD SAINT.

FOR ELEVEN HUNDRED YEARS IRELAND HAS HONORED ONE MAN.

The Memory of St. Patrick Has Been Cherished by Irishmen and Their Descendants with a Consistency That Has Been Unvarying Through Many Years.

America, so far as we know, has no patron saint. Columbus was never canonized and George Washington lived too late for such honors.

We would not willingly say a depreciator of the memory of St. Patrick, but we would not willingly say a depreciator of the memory of St. Patrick.

And yet it is curious how entirely this eminent saint has been overlooked in naming places. You find him mentioned through the alphabet, from St. Alban to St. Vincent.

It is to be lamented that so much of the poetry, song and trolletry of a lively and unmercenary age has been gathered around this man.

According to history, Patrick was a farmer's son, either on the coast of France or of Scotland.

At sixteen he was carried captive into Ireland and was in slavery for six years. While serving as a herdsman he converted his Irish neighbors to the Christian faith.

St. Bernard testifies that St. Patrick fixed his metropolitan seat at Armagh. He devoted much attention to the suppression of slavery.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED There are some things that can't be done in a moment.

Note what a Grand Rapids lady says about it. The widow of a once prominent lawyer of this city, who has lived here for thirty years and is well known and highly respected by hundreds, makes the following voluntary statement:

It was driven by force of necessity to consult some specialist in regard to my catarrh of my head, that had been troubling me for twenty-five years.

Yesterday Detectives Smith and Barr took a case and arrested Wm. Riden and John Harding, former employes at the Morton. They confessed and turned over four boxes of the choice imported goods could be found. The goods were recovered and Bayless will prosecute the boys.

Mr. Hervey Reppes to the Eagle Editor MORGAN PRESS.—In the Eagle of yesterday I noticed an article under the heading, "Interesting News Picked Up Around the Court Rooms," in which the facts relating to the controversy between William and John Kotvis and myself are somewhat misrepresented, and I wish to set myself right before the publication of the article.
I have occupied the store in the Kotvis building nearly sixteen years. On Dec. 3, 1885, a lease was executed for six years from April 1, 1886, at a rental of $71 per month for the first three years and $75 per month for the last three years, with privilege of renting said store at the end of said term of six years at such annual rent and for such further time as the parties hereto may then (April 1, 1892) agree.
When this lease was made it was specially understood and agreed, that in case at the expiration of the lease any increase in the rent was going to be made, such increase should be reasonable and in proportion with the general advance of the value of the property on Monroe street, if such value should prove to have increased.
During the time this lease was in force, a verbal agreement was also made between William Kotvis and myself, that in case he should vacate the room back of my store (then occupied by Van Driele & Co.) I should have the preference of renting same at such price as he could obtain from other parties.
Relying on what I then supposed to be the verbal agreement, I continued not to speak of the fact that he then was and still is ignoring a prominent church member, and claims to be a Christian par excellence, I had not the least idea that he would or could disregard the verbal agreement he made and his promises in regard to his future action in this matter.
When the People's Savings bank made an offer for the rooms in the rear of my store, Mr. Kotvis rented the same to that institution, without giving me any notice or chance whatsoever, thereby entirely ignoring and violating the agreement and promise.
At the expiration of the aforesaid lease of the store now occupied by my partner and myself, Mr. Kotvis offered to renew the lease at a rental of $3,000 per annum, an amount being 125 per cent higher than the rent paid for the last year.
As I considered this increase of 125 per cent in rent unreasonable and entirely out of proportion with the advance in the value of the property, and consequently contrary to the verbal agreement he made, I offered Mr. Kotvis to have this rent matter settled by arbitration, which he flatly refused.
That a financial institution, even though it calls itself a people's bank, can afford to pay exorbitant rent for its quarters will not astonish anybody acquainted with the real object of such concerns, but that a man claiming to be a Christian, a man who teaches the principles of the Gospels, should follow the example of him who despised the Pharisees and cast the money changers and their tables out of the temple, should be capable of such base treatment as I have been subjected to, is beyond my comprehension.
If Mr. William Kotvis will, before a justice under oath, deny the truth of the above statements, I hereby offer to pay $100 to any charitable institution he may name.
ANTHONY ZIMMERMAN.
Grand Rapids, April 15, 1936.
