Mr. Frick Has Not Taken His Cue from the Express Views of His Master, or the Iron King to One Thing Before the Public and Another in His Office.

Attempts have been made to interview Homestead Carnegie in Scotland as to his attitude toward the strike. He declined to express any views as to the merits of the controversy.

What should Mr. Frick have done, instead of taking the ridiculous step of taking the money out of the hands of the workers? He should have proposed arbitration of the differences.

Special Sale for Today. As a special inducement to horsemen and others who are in town today, we have a special sale of our goods. We have them until our store, we will offer 50c and 75c shirts for 30c, black black shirts 30c, an offer that no other house in the city will make.

FRODO PLATFORM. The Party Wants Several Things Besides Prohibition.

The state Prohibition convention at Oosawa, besides affirming the national platform, also adopted the following resolutions: "We favor, and when we come to power will establish a practical and efficient system of the civil service based on merit and the past conduct of things will be impossible."

Whereas, many young men whose parents are anxious to see them engaged in a useful and honorable occupation of our state troops, we believe it to be the duty of our state authorities to provide for such service with moral influences. We therefore regard with abhorrence the sale of intoxicating liquor to the troops while in the service of the state and the equally heinous crime of permitting the debauching of the youth of our state and nation in attendance at our state educational institutions by the refusal of both city and state legislatures to restrict them from the open saloon and brothels at the very door of these schools.

We call upon all voters who have a right to vote in this election, who, by permitting such outrages, have proved themselves traitors to the best hopes and interests of their state.

All pay for public services should be reasonable salaries and not by fees, and where fees are exacted they should be for the benefit of the public.

The granting of passes by railroads to public officers should be prohibited and the allowance should be made a misdemeanor.

We further favor a graduated income tax to be levied on all property.

We render the White Rose league our sincere thanks for its efficient aid in the struggle against the liquor traffic, and its rapidly widening influence in the state and nation.

We arraign for public condemnation the pusillanimous and treacherous attitude of the Democratic and Republican parties toward the liquor question. The anti-sympathetic declaration of the Democratic party is particularly reprehensible by the other as equally unwise and misleading and show the miserable state of each old organization. It is equally apparent that the party launched the craft, the so-called "Prohibition party," which, in its attempts to induce prohibition as law, has already fatally strangled on its own.

Recognizing the vital importance of the thorough organization of the prohibition students of our land, we heartily endorse the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association of the United States, organized in Philadelphia last June, and we commend its work to the consideration and support of all Prohibitionists.

We repudiate the principle of local option as a humiliating and degrading method of dealing with the liquor traffic used by dominant parties in league with the saloon power, to quiet the angry public conscience, and yet retain the temperance voters in the rural districts without alienating the urban voters of the city.

Property covered by delinquent taxes, after ample time for redemption, should be sold to the state and not to speculators.

We insist upon the right of the state to require that all of its voters be educated in the common branches of the English language, so that all under state public and private, shall be under state inspection and supervision, and that no school shall be maintained by a municipal institution not maintained by the state.

The right of suffrage should be granted to all citizens regardless of sex. No person should hereafter be given the ballot, who is unable to read and write the official language of our country.

THE SWEATER MUST GO. The New York Law, When Enforced, Will Empty the Trench House Dress.

It is now a foregone conclusion that within a short time there will be no more of the kind of sweaters which are now being sold, some of which will be wiped out forever, and others will be so altered that the present condition of things will be impossible.

All this will be brought about by the enforcement of the new law. Already a number of sweaters have anticipated the law by giving up the unimproved worksheds and transferring the work to other cities, which are not so well served by the law.

In the new central office of the factory inspection department, room 11, Clinton hall, Astor place, Mr. Frazer and a corps of assistants are now busy notifying those who are violating the new law and granting permits to the small percentage of factories which keep up with its provisions.

It is in the clothing trades on the east side that a radical change must take place, and the most tremendous change which has taken place in the history of labor in New York.

Of the 12,000 factories in this city an estimated 10,000 are now employing men, employing from four people each up, which, for the purposes of the law, have been dignified with the name of "factories."

In these small, noisome dens a generation of people have been subjected to a system of six hours work in any other civilized city in the world.

At first they suffered in silence, thinking in their ignorance of America that the conditions were not so bad as they were, and men and women and that there was no hope for the future.

They were the steps of Russia, Hungary and Austria, to this country as a rich land, where every one prospered. Before the war, the people of this country were seized upon by the sweater, given employment in the miserable, hot, holes where they have since toiled almost night and day, and to them until a year or two ago there was no other world for working men but to spend their lives in these darksome surroundings with their never ending toil.

Unhappily many of the robbers in which the victims of the sweaters work must come down. They are unfit for human beings to live in, and can in no way be altered so as to enable them to be maintained as factories under the provisions of the law. A feeble attempt has been made to control the new law unconstitutional, but the movement has died away.

Some of these dens are spindal and filthy beyond description, and when they are pulled down and the light of day let into their grim recesses will be the extent of the misery these robbers could be made known.

In the busy lives of Ludlow, Essex, Suffolk, Essex, Norfolk, and other counties, the contractor bosses are making an effort to comply with the law by distributing their hands through additional employees.

But they cannot evade the law by this means. The extent of the rooms would be impossible to run any kind of a business and provide the requisite amount of air space for each individual.

It is the duty of every citizen to take their places, as the abominable dens in which these people lived and worked could not be lived in, except by the most hardy and strenuous, accustomed to it.—New York Journal.

Removes Our Liberties. Mayor E. A. Noonan, of St. Louis, sends a communication recently printed in The Post-Dispatch.

It is a menace to our liberties and to our state and general governments to permit outside and irresponsible hirelings to be imported into a state to supersede the constituted authorities or to threaten or rob our people. No necessary or justifiable reason can be made or could excuse such invasions. No state would tolerate any such entrance into its borders of any foreign powers.

Yet such invasions would not be half so dangerous to our liberties as the secret, insidious practice of concentrating great bodies of men, whether acting under the orders of self constituted detective agencies or of other irresponsible and unlawful masters in our states, whenever a question between capital and labor arises. Not all the damage that has been done through mob rule, even the loss of life and property in our land, could so jeopardize our institutions as this modern reliance of plutocracy on the importation of strike-breakers of our states and even the United States, to trample our laws under their feet, and attempt to settle social relations and economic questions with the bullets of hired assassins.

Miss Kenney. The first woman officially appointed as organizer for the American Federation of Labor is Miss Mary E. Kenney, who entered the field last January. Miss Kenney is a young woman of considerable force of character. She has traveled extensively with combinations of circumstances that would have afforded a less convincing manner. She is a first physical proportion, with a sweet voice, a fascinating smile and a good command of language, besides a practical knowledge of the working girl's needs, and all of which fit her for drawing the confidence of the girls and leading them into her organization.

The Essentials of Arbitration. The principle of arbitration will be applied in the dispute between the sides to the controversy are willing to hear each other, and not to insist blindly on their own immutable and absolute rights. The principle of arbitration is perfectly consistent with the rights of both, and is indeed the only way in which a dispute between employer's privilege, measurably. It is not inconsistent with the rights of the employer's privilege.—Washington Star.

People's Party Convention. A county convention of the People's party of the county of Kent will be held in Kent Temple hall, corner South Division and Fifth streets, on Saturday, August 14, for the purpose of electing delegates to the National convention of the party to be held in Chicago, Ill., on September 10, 1892.

A Cold Day in the Senate. Celebrated though it may be by the dignity of its proceedings, the senate occasionally affords rare amusement to those who are compelled to attend its sessions.

Friday it furnished an incident which is still being recalled about. There is a new reading clerk in the chamber. He has a good voice, but has not "caught on" to his position as yet.

His position. Vice President Morton had some executive communications before the senate, among them, by mistake a treaty negotiating by this government with Great Britain for the improvement of the condition of sailors on the high seas. So the reading clerk's position papers announced that this treaty had been perfected, but not even a whisper concerning it had been dropped in the public ear by the president or those associated with him.

The new clerk seized upon this message and began to read it. He was interrupted by the experienced employes next to him grasped his arm, the ancient Captain Bassett shot out of his chair, and the mercury in the thermometer rose to 100 degrees.

While the senators looked helplessly around the treaty was rescinded and a new treaty negotiating by this government was placed in the clerk's hand. His voice was husky for the next hour, and the temperature in the neighborhood of the clerk's desk fell 100 degrees after the adjournment.—Washington Letter.

A Story About Disraeli. Lord Beaconsfield once delivered a famous speech in Edinburgh, which was not reported in its entirety at the time. It was so good that it was followed by a great number of his party—a stinging reminder for which his aristocratic following did not thank him. On this occasion he was a failure. It was delivered at a banquet, and the flower and chivalry of the Tory party were around the premier at the head table.

By some mistake a decanter of good port instead of light claret was placed in front of the mystic statesman when he rose to speak, and every time he took a sip he felt rejuvenated, and the more he took the more he felt inclined to talk. He spoke for an hour, and his eyes shined brightly. Disraeli poured forth column after column for hours, and the reporters were turning out from the "copy" by manufacturing rapidly far beyond the abilities of the telegraphists to cope with.

The wires were gorged, the great speech only reached the newspapers in a mangled form, and wherever it was read was met with derision and a considerable row. But it may be added that some of the reporters on that occasion had looked upon the wine when it was used, and their notes were being exercised on stinks when they came to decipher them.—San Francisco Call.

Indiana Has No Cause to Complain. Indiana was first represented on a national presidential ticket in 1852, when George W. English was the candidate of the Free Soil Democrats for vice president. The ticket received no electoral votes.

Indiana's next representative was Schwab Foster, who was elected vice president along with General Grant in 1868. In 1872 no Indiana name was on the regular ticket, but at the same time George W. English, the Democratic electoral votes were most of them cast for Thomas A. Hendricks, and a few vice presidential votes were cast for George W. Julian. In 1876 Thomas A. Hendricks was the candidate for vice president on the Democratic ticket, and in 1880 William H. English played a similar role. In 1884 Thomas A. Hendricks retained his place as second on the Democratic ticket, and in 1888 William H. English was placed in the White House. This year he is on the ticket again. It is thus seen that in every presidential campaign since 1868 Indiana has had vital interest in the result.—Indianapolis News.

Three Black Crosses Again. The growth of a "hine and cry" on the banks of the Seine. Two fishermen in a boat got into an altercation with a woman engaged in washing a puddle on shore, splashed her with water and fled from the scene. A crowd collected, the cry was raised that a woman had been drowned, and scared by the success of their joke the two fishermen attempted to escape down the river.

They were finally arrested at some distance on the charge of having carried a woman and her baby for the sake of the rings worn by the former, and of having thrown the bodies into the water and left the child again. It is the duty of the police to save them from the 2,000 people who had followed them along the shore in order to lynch them.
